

Theme

Cities are often the main ports of entry for migration and the location where migration-related diversity is manifested most prominently. This conference turns attention to the urban dimension of migration and migration-related diversity. What implications does migration have for the city and for urban life, how can cities respond to both the challenges and opportunities offered by migration and diversity?

We welcome contributions from various disciplines, such as political science, sociology, economics, history, law, anthropology, public administration, demography and social geography. It is possible to submit individual papers, panel proposals and workshops (all sessions will each be assigned 90 minutes).

Submissions directly related to the conference theme are welcomed as well as those on other topics in the broad field of migration and ethnic studies. Panels and papers will be brought together into thematic lines throughout the conference program:

- Migration, diversity & the city
- The refugee crisis
- Ageing Migrants: demography, welfare and agency
- Education and Social Mobility
- Interaction of Migrant Integration and Transnationalism
- Migration, Citizenship and Political Participation
- Popular Art, Diversity and Cultural Policies in Post-Migration Urban Settings
