

Migration research in the Mediterranean in perspective: variable focal length

Editors: Ricard Zapata-Barrero and Luisa Faustini

This special issue aims to provide an updated picture of some new trends mapping the Mediterranean Migration Research Agenda. The contributions included in this Special Issue have been selected from the 15th IMISCOE Annual

Open Access

Click here!

Conference in Barcelona (2018), which reaffirmed the importance of the Mediterranean region for research in Migration Studies. They offer recent and original reflections coming from several disciplines and applying a variety of methodologies and levels of analysis. The selection of articles covers different approaches that go from the nature of human (im)mobility to the policies and relations among states that arise within this context. It also includes a first contribution on the political ethics of migration that frame a reference for dialogue with the rest of contributions.

Editorial: “Mediterranean Thinking” for mapping a Mediterranean migration research agenda. (Jan. 2020)

Ricard Zapata Barrero (GRITIM-UPF- Spain)

Download

Mare nostrum: the political ethics of migration in the Mediterranean. (Feb 2019)

Rainer Bauböck (EUI-Italy)

Download

Lost in limbo? Navigating (im)mobilities and practices of appropriation of non-deportable refugees in the Mediterranean area (June 2019)

Sarah Nimführ (University of Vienna- Austria) and Buba Sesay (no affiliation)

Download

Framing migration in the southern Mediterranean: how do civil society actors evaluate EU migration policies? The case of Tunisia (Jan 2020)

Ferruccio Pastore and Emanuela Roman (Fieri-Italy)

Download

Migrant citizenship, privileged local belonging and the option to return: Germans on the Turkish coast (Feb 2020)

Margit Fause (Darmstadt University of Applied Science-Germany)

Download

Migration as one of several adaptation strategies for environmental limitations in Tunisia. Evidence from El Faouar (Feb 2020)

Karolina Sobczak-Szelc (University of Warsaw-Poland) and Naima Fekih (University of Tunis-Tunisia)

Download

Another nexus? Exploring narratives on the linkage between EU external migration policies and the democratization of the Southern Mediterranean neighbourhood (Feb 2020)

Luisa Faustini Torres (GRITIM-UPF-Spain)

Download

